The present invention relates to a technology for an information recording/reproducing apparatus, which is capable of recording/reproducing information while moving an optical pickup in the radial direction of a disk-shaped recording medium. Various types of information recording/reproducing apparatus which are capable of recording/reproducing information while moving the optical pickup in the radial direction of a disk-shaped recording medium are known. For example, a conventional information recording/reproducing apparatus disclosed in Japanese patent application laid-open No. 8-300206 moves a loading/unloading mechanism in the radial direction of a disk-shaped recording medium so that a spindle motor loaded with the recording medium is moved in the radial direction. The conventional information recording/reproducing apparatus moves the loading/unloading mechanism by a predetermined distance from the loading position of the spindle motor for the following reasons. When a disk-shaped recording medium which is rotating by the spindle motor is loaded on a turntable of the information recording/reproducing apparatus, it is necessary to suppress vibration which may arise from a load on the turntable due to the rotating disk-shaped recording medium until the information recording/reproducing apparatus is stabilized and ready for operation. Also, in order to prevent disk-shaped recording medium from being displaced from the turntable due to vibration and the like, it is necessary to move the loading/unloading mechanism to a position further from the spindle motor. In the conventional information recording/reproducing apparatus, the loading position of the spindle motor is positioned on the outer side of the turntable in order to allow the loading/unloading mechanism to be moved away from the spindle motor. For this reason, a disk-shaped recording medium, which is rotating when loaded on the turntable, will not interfere with the loading/unloading mechanism. The conventional information recording/reproducing apparatus also is provided with a guide post which
