But it just took a few weeks for the glare to become apparent and now, this is no longer a party season destination Courtesy of Visit Waikiki "This house is built from recycled water bottles!" I was standing on the pink roof of Ka'eo'ana, a luxury penthouse near the Royal Hawaiian Shopping Center. And this is how I learned that the most expensive home in Waikiki recently sold for over $18.3 million and it's made of one big plug of curiosity. "There's glass bottle insulation on the side of the building and the fire wall, too," Waikiki real estate broker Matt Allan told me. "Just about every piece of the house is made from recycled bottles." The home is reportedly the most expensive glass bottle-recycled home in the world, according to Business Wire, a news and information service for the global business community. Taryn Claassen It's a residential building on the Rainbow Mall, which was built in 1976 and last remodeled in 2001. It's a massive interior space, with two bedrooms, a home theater, formal dining area and rooftop spa. "There's more than 220,000 bottles and other bottles embedded in this place," said Matt. "Glass bottles." Taryn Claassen Matt explained that the larger home was donated to the Royal Hawaiian Center and the property is for sale at $20,000 per square foot. "So for this home, you could easily get over
