Parathyroid glands are glandular organs that lie in the retro-esophageal region of the neck and secrete parathyroid hormone (PTH). The primary tumour of parathyroid glands is a parathyroid adenoma or a hyperplasia. From a clinical point of view, the most important characteristic of primary hyperparathyroidism is hypercalcaemia. To avoid the complication, it is important to understand the pathophysiology and clinical manifestations of this condition. Secondly, as patients with parathyroid hyperfunction are at high risk of developing osteoporosis and kidney stones.Freddie White (racing driver) Freddie White (January 8, 1912 – May 2, 1987) was an American professional stock car racing driver. White competed in 41 career races, and scored a career-best sixth-place points finish at the Atlanta 100. His best season was in 1949, when he finished with five top-ten finishes. The son of famed stock car driver Gwyn White, Freddie served in the U.S. Army during World War II. Freddie and his brother Nelson won the AAA Eastern Division Championship in 1939 and 1940. Career Start of career While serving in the U.S. Army during World War II, White raced in civilian cars. After serving in the Army for three years, White made his initial stock car appearance in 1948. Gwyn White had a son named Freddie that he named after himself. White decided to race to fulfill his dream, and in 1948 finished third in the AAA Eastern Division Championship standings. In 1949, White had five top-tens, finished with a top-five in every race he finished in, and scored a career-best sixth place points finish at the Atlanta 100. Later career After missing a part of the 1952 season due to illness, White turned back to sprint car racing in 1953 and 1954. In 1955, White attempted to make the transition to NASCAR, but could not qualify his car. White raced in 41 career NASCAR races, with top-fives in eleven of those races. His best finishes were twelfth (1953 St. Louis race), tenth (1958 Atlanta race), and eighth

LONDON (Reuters) - China’s Huawei is refusing to use U.S. technology due to the “hostile” atmosphere, according to a person with knowledge of the matter, in the latest setback for the world’s second largest telecoms equipment maker. FILE PHOTO: A Huawei company logo is pictured on the front of a building under construction in Beijing, China December 6, 2019. REUTERS/Jason Lee/File Photo Huawei said it was a long-standing policy to not use components manufactured by sanctioned countries like the United States, which alleges the company’s equipment could be used by Beijing for espionage. The U.S. government has urged U.S. companies, including Cisco, Intel, Microsoft and Qualcomm, to sever ties with Huawei, threatening to ban U.S. firms from supplying components to the Chinese company. The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that U.S. companies had been unable to cooperate with Huawei for some time because the Chinese firm was so concerned about what U.S. technology it was using. “It’s
