HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A pair of GOP state lawmakers say state Rep. Daryl Metcalfe is trying to get an LGBT-friendly anti-discrimination law passed by gathering signatures to put the proposal on Pennsylvania's 2018 ballot. Republican lawmakers in both the state House and Senate said Metcalfe has circulated petitions to make a legal challenge to the bill. Metcalfe says he wants to protect churches from lawsuits that could be filed by people who feel they have been discriminated against because of their sexual orientation or gender identity. The lieutenant governor was the bill's sponsor in the House and its author in the Senate. The leaders of the Republican-controlled state House and Senate said Sunday that they had learned of the effort this weekend. They said they are ready to challenge it in court.

A program that allows you to create macros or automated text sequences, without having to retype the same text over and over again. Easy and simple to use Another good thing about this program is its ease of use. You don't even need to go through all the programming steps, because you can just go ahead and use it, knowing that the program will do everything for you. Not only that, but it's also very easy to add or edit macros in this program. The first thing you have to do is start the program, and then select Edit. Next, you're going to have to choose the text area you want to add the macro to. Finally, you just have to start typing the macro and then select the finish option. If you want to edit the current macro, you'll need to open it up by clicking on the shortcut and then select Edit. If you'd like to add a new macro, just click on Add, and a window will pop up, which will allow you to input all the details of the new macro.

Customizing macros When it comes to settings, the program offers a wide array of options, allowing you to view macro shortcuts and even customize the characters of a particular macro. You can select from the following: Window borders Character colors Actions Animated effects Collapse keystrokes It's important to mention that you're able to see the settings by clicking on the Options button, which opens up a submenu. You can also hide the menu by clicking on the Options button again, or you can go to the shortcut to see a complete list of the macro commands. Additionally, the program comes with two different editors, which allow you to edit the text. For instance, you can select a default text from a macro window, or you can open up the editor itself. There are three different editors for the default text, including Normal, Bold, and Bold Italic. As for the second editor, it's customizable and offers you a variety of fonts and colors, plus a full menu of text functions.

Support and program updates The program also offers you a vast number of resources to help you with your problem solving. These resources include forums, FAQs, and videos, as well as a detailed troubleshooting guide. Moreover, the program's developer offers regular updates and technical support. Of course, a registration is needed to access all the functional

Black Women Are Now Accepting That Their Skin Is Perfectly White People may be waking up to the fact that some skin tones are 'whiter' than others, but we're getting the opposite result. Black people are now open to the fact that their skin is perfect. We're seeing a huge change in the way white people are looking at the way they view the skin tones of other races, and this is even hitting the skin tones of black people. Back in May, the Changing Attitudes Study published by the University of California at Los Angeles's Williams Institute, a human sexuality think tank, found that the notion of racial interracial attraction is changing. After a decade of data collection, the study found that 41% of interracial couples were white-black, which is the highest share since records began in 1960. Here's how the study defined interracial attraction: "All types of interracial relationships were included in the survey, but for the purposes of this analysis, an interracial couple was defined as a non-Hispanic person who was either Black-White or White-Black; Asian and Latino interracial couples were excluded. This means that some persons of color who were the partners of White persons (and vice versa) were excluded from the sample." Now, the study has discovered that we're starting to see people of color looking at the idea of interracial dating and marriage. In a brand new study, the data also found that black people are no longer afraid to be open about their desire to date white people, and this is proving to have a really good effect on the black population. The same study revealed that after considering their own racial backgrounds, 41% of black people no longer felt that dating someone of a different race was impossible. Commenting on the big change, lead researcher Dr. Melissa Jackson said: "Our data shows that more black people now feel that it is acceptable for them to pursue a relationship with someone of another race. "Among black people, this is the highest rate of acceptance of relationship of this kind since 1960. "And this recent shift in attitude appears to be having a real impact on the way that black people view other people of different races. "For example, more than twice as many black people now believe that the person of their race would date a white person, rather than black, as did so in 1960." Travis Johnson, a 26-year-old black man from Massachusetts, said: "I've always felt that black people should be in more interracial relationships, but I've never felt comfortable speaking up about it. "It's not
