Village-level mapping of CO₂, NH₃, and land cover on livestock-grazed lands in the United States. Human emissions of CO₂ have increased rapidly over the past century, causing a greenhouse effect that is reducing the ground-level atmospheric CO₂ concentration from ~3800 ppm to ~370 ppm today. As a result of the increase in the concentration of atmospheric CO₂, there is considerable interest in developing a method to directly monitor CO₂ emissions from livestock-grazed lands. Here, we develop a method for generating fine-scale maps of atmospheric CO₂ (8 μg/m³ 1cb139a0ed
