Not only will you find all the icons that you need for your desktop, you will also find firefly, nautilus, thunderbird, grooveshark and kde icons.

Radiance icon set: This is a new icon pack that packs a lot of amazing icons for you to use. The icons in here are colorful and have a wonderful clarity to them. These icons are perfect for web development and looking at them for a long time can really help you design better and understand a concept. The icons in here will surely help you organize your desktop in a better way. This icon pack is divided into five sections. The first set is titled "Utilities" and contains icons for web browsers, text editors, photos, video and others. The second set is titled "Science" and contains a wide variety of scientific icons like particles, formulas, scientific equipment and more. The third set is titled "People" and contains icons for applications and tools related to social networks. The fourth set is titled "Music and Media" and contains icons for applications and tools used for music and video viewing and management. The last set is "Finance" and contains icons for a wide variety of financial related applications. Each icon pack contains 948 icons and offers various sizes. The last row in each set is titled "Desktop". This row contains icons for special and complex functions. This icon pack includes SVG files for nearly all of the used icons. The icons are created with the help of mspaint, which makes use of transparent lines, using a simple and boring method. This is especially easy for the screenshots and informational icons which do not have to be realistic enough. For the rest, the icons are created more clearly and more professional.

Which is the best way to declare a condition that the values of an input box doesn't have any value? I know of two ways: The first is using JavaScript event onchange: The second is using HTML5 attribute A: Depends on what you are trying to accomplish. For checking whether it has a value, the value attribute is the right way to go. For doing an empty check, the value attribute will not work as you expect, because it will check the value only once when the element is first created. If you set the value and forget about it, then it's value will not matter anymore. For checking that it's empty, you can use oninput instead. A: With onkeyup, after key has been pushed you want to get rid of the value. And obviously if they put text in it, you want to keep it You could use You could also set a flag on blur to check for empty values at that time: Q: How to calculate the waiting time
