Farmers are growing crops and raising livestock, caring for animals and working the farm at the same time. Bolstered by a healthy economy, farmers are stocking up on supplies and increasing their production. The last decade, however, has been a bleak one for farmers. President Trump's trade dispute with China has decimated global commodity prices and it appears that the trend will continue. But economists believe that the market will rebalance and demand will rise with higher prices, creating the potential for a modest rebound in farm income. “We are at the start of a good cycle for US agriculture,” says Mike Williams, chief economist with the American Farm Bureau Federation. “We know for the past 10 to 15 years we have had a roller-coaster business cycle: low prices, a boom cycle and then a bust cycle. We’re starting to see prices rising again.”

The average farm profit is now around $1,200. This compares with $2,500 during the housing bust in the
