"Once upon a time, long, long ago, someone kind and wise created the perfect world, granting peace and prosperity to all that dwelt within its boundaries. The gods became jealous of the creation, and commanded one of their kind to seize control of it. However, a dragon which had not been appeased by the gifts of the Creator burst forth, and devoured the gods' sphere. Darkness and despair filled the world, and order came to be lost. "Long ago, another was born from within the womb of a single egg, and brought back to life the light of hope. And so was the world born anew, and the tattered darkness dissipated. The dragon of chaos had been vanquished, and a new era of peace and prosperity saw the rise of a new sovereign. "And thus was the world made, blessed and adorned by the perfection of divine Creation. The righteous were to be saved and led by grace, the gods of Creation were to rise as the Elden. And the elden were to be the ones to foster peace and prosperity on the face of the Earth. Those who were given the power to wield the holy blades of justice - the Elden - were to be the protectors of all that was good, and the upholders of Creation. "But not all creatures that dwelled in the lands of Creation were made by the hands of divine Creation. Some dwelt in the shadows - monsters which had been cursed by the gods. Some merely inhabited the corners of Creation - creatures which had an affinity for the void that could not be reasoned with. And others were the means by which Creation and destruction would always be balanced... "I take the power of the Elden Ring." "You must enter

Or it's the Hero's Retinue." "I'll take care of it." "I understand. But there's something you need to know first. As you are the Dragon Slayer, you are able to unleash the powers of the Elden Ring. But using the power of the Elden Ring brings a heavy price to the Elden. And today, you must face your greatest trial. "...But I can't cast a

For instance, during battles it's possible for Zelda to attack with "the silver arrow" or complete her with a "slice of cake." The Shadow Gallery is a bit like an after school party where all the different monsters on the map have their own special abilities. 20 Sep 2010 06:10:33 +0000Arika178494 at >Bullpen Notes: Jeff Samardzija Shows Us What Happens With Tim Lincecum The Giants' best closer of 2012, Sergio Romo, has been banished to the Minors. That's bad news for the rest of the pen, especially Joe Kennedy, Joe Beimel and Jeremy Affeldt, who were already dealing with an overcrowded, over-worked bullpen. Deputy closer Sergio Romo's father saw him struggle with Yankee Stadium's late, August confluence of milestones—Sergio losing his save for the ninth consecutive game on August 24, his father's birthday—which led to the trade. “[Romo's] working hard, and there's no question he doesn't want to move,” said Affeldt. “But I think I speak on behalf of the clubhouse when I say, ‘This team needs what he brings. He's been a pro, and we're gonna need him.’ We need him, and we're gonna need him, and we're gonna respect it if he can't be here. We're gonna try to do the best we can to make him available. But he's gotta be (sorry), he's gotta be. You gotta respect that.” Joe Beimel admits, “I'm not sure what his plans are at this point, but if he moved to the bullpen he could help.” Lincecum's Week 2 loss was televised nationally, and pretty well publicized. But since then, he's been 2-0 with a 0.98 ERA with six strikeouts and no walks in five outings, and has been one of the most impressive young pitchers in the game thus far this season. “Ryan Vogelsong, Timmy still. Two Novel Mutations in the PINK1 Gene in Two Deceased Patients with Familial Parkinson's Disease. Mutations in the PTEN-induced kinase 1 (PINK1) gene are the most common cause of autosomal recessive early-onset recessive parkinsonism. Here we describe the pedigree of a large consanguineous family with various degrees of spontaneous motor and psychiatric signs. After clinical investigation, the patients underwent genetic testing via PCR amplification and sequencing of the PINK1 gene and subsequent Sanger sequencing. Both affected patients showed a novel homozygous single nucleotide insertion in exon 6 of the PINK1 gene, conferring a frameshift mutation that could result in a truncated form of the protein. The missense mutation R102C identified in one of the affected patients was the second mutation identified in this gene and was predicted to be pathogenic and deleterious by computational prediction analysis. We describe a large consanguineous family with Parkinson's disease. Genetic analysis revealed 2 novel PINK1 gene mutations, R102C and a frameshift. Controlling the nanocrystallinity and phase transformation behaviour of Ti-25Al particles using molten NaCl-NaAlCl<sub>4</sub> eutectic bath - Modulation of the fluoride release in dental cements. In this work, we have examined the influence of the nanocrystalline and sessile microstructure of Ti-25Al powders on their in vitro fluoride release behaviour. The fabrication of high-purity Ti-25Al powders at different temperatures and arc currents is presented. The effects of arc current and sintering temperature were studied. The effect of a molten eutectic NaCl-NaAlCl<sub>4</sub> Na<sub>3</sub>AlF<sub>6</sub> solution in contact with Ti-25Al specimens throughout sintering was also investigated. Structural, mechanical and bioactivity properties in simulated body fluids (SBF) were examined using X-ray diffraction, Vicker's hardness number, Raman spectrum and apatite formation ability, respectively
