Eternal Gold Review - NFT World Armored Core 5 has had a great run, but that's not quite enough these days. It's almost time to welcome Armored Core's spiritual successor, the extremely-titled, armored action RPG, Armored Core V: Master of Arena. While the lack of an Armored Core series beat-em-up puts the game at a big disadvantage from the outset, the game is a surprisingly solid IP that's sure to please fans and offer a fresh experience for newcomers. ...

ExpandQ: Symfony2 custom data transformer I need to cache data by adding some new fields to the caches and i dont know how i should use Symfony data transformer for that. Here is the scenario: I have three entities (Article, Comment and Observer) There is a function to add an observer to an Article Each Observer can see only the data of its Article object and its comments Article can have many comments Article can be viewed by many observers and comments To handle this, i have an ArticleTransformer that looks like that: public function __invoke(array $caches, array $tags, array $options) { // TODO do something return $caches; } The problem is that because Article is not in the cache itself, its not loaded and the comments and observers cache couldnt find it and return null. How should i use Symfony data transformer to solve this? Thanks in advance A: There are two ways you can implement this scenario: Option 1 - In-Memory cache If you want to use an in-memory cache (Redis and memcached are examples of this), you can create a type for this. Type is basically a "storage facility", that maps a class name to the actual class. It's also very useful when you would like to load a specific state of your system. You can read more about it in the documentation Example: `getCacheType bff6bb2d33`

"A long winter has passed, and a festival has been held to celebrate the spring. At the festival, one of the elders of the village observed that the snowfall had not melted as quickly as the time before. ""The older you are, the more you appreciate the snow. There is an old saying. The snow covering the fields is beautiful, and one could truly feel the peace of the Valley. It stands to reason that one who is old enough to feel peace, is a grand old man. ""At the festival, the old man said this, but the villagers gave no heed. ""A village elder asked, "When the snow melts, will you think of me, and in my place hold your festival?" ""The elder was very old, and the villagers said, "Not now!" ""But, he did not die because he was old. Not at all! ""The woman who was holding his hand moved even closer to the old man, and she said, "Grandpa, are you kidding? ""In the morning, you will be going into the Valley. If the fields are still covered with snow, then you will hold your festival!" ""The old man smiled at his granddaughter, and he said, "All right!" ""At this, the villagers looked at each other as if in a daze, and they exclaimed, "Who will go along on his journey into the Valley?" ""But it is too cold for one who is old. All the snow will be left for you. ""Nevertheless, the elder said, "Very well, then!" ""There are just a few things to do before you head into the Valley. We shall make snow blocks. ""The elders and the townspeople made the snow blocks, and the warm wind blew in from the Valley. The elder also wrapped up his granddaughter in many blankets, and she cried. ""However, at the last minute, the elders and the villagers saw a bright light. From the sky came a strange light, and they could hear a voice calling out, "It must be you, Grandpa!" ""The voice suddenly sounded like a woman's voice. Then, a young man appeared. It was him. ""He had come to the festival with his grandfather
