So, the best way to access and understand its financials is by calculating and comparing revenue. Here's how the commercial success of the video games is calculated. The commercial success of video games is calculated by the game's revenue per platform, in current year. Platform data is based on the sales of the consoles or portable devices in use. The data does not include downloaded games on smartphones and tablets, or secondhand or used console sales. A lot of the revenue is earned abroad, so all figures are given in current year. US figures are recorded as they are the most dominant market, and based on the same system as Europe and most of the rest of the world. All figures are based on revenue figures published by GfK Npower and similar sources. A new FIFA World Cup gives you access to your own PA System, that connects you to the streets and all the sights of the host cities in FIFA World Cup. ]]>>Photoresponsive molecular conical helix is an intermediate in the photoisomerization of alternating copolymers made from nematic and semiconducting diblock copolymer. The blue, liquid crystal-directed irreversible photoisomerization of a series of diblock co-polymers made from nematic poly[(9,9'-bis-n-decyloxy-(3,3'-bis-2-ethylhexyloxy)-silole)-2,7-)-2,7'-dimethoxy-1,1'-biphenylene and poly(3-octylthiophene-2,5-diyl) blocks in the nematic-rich phase by UV irradiation are shown. The co-polymer contains the photochrome tetrathiafulvalene-2,2'-bipyridine moiety, which allows the oligomerization as well as the photoisomerization of the principal arms. The degree of polymerization between the tetrathiafulvalene units is quantitated by electron paramagnetic resonance spectroscopy. The time and light-dose dependent photoinduced isomerization is only partially reversible with the retardation in the thermal relaxation of the remaining isomer. The reversible (nematic) and irreversible (twisted) states are verified by small-angle X-ray scattering. The photoisomerization is correlated to the irradiation at the wavelength corresponding to the electronic absorption spectrum of the oligomer. Conformational changes of the block copolymer heads are monitored by X-ray diffraction in the orientation-selected nematic phase. This experimental approach is interesting since the possible equilibrium populations of the molecular conical helices are deduced from the population of the right- and left-handed isomers. If the block copolymer retains the
