This article provides an overview of some of the basic functions of Photoshop, explaining what exactly is occurring in image creation and editing. It is not intended to take the place of any specific article about Photoshop. Watch this video tutorial series on the basics of Photoshop. A. Working with Layers All of Photoshop's features are organized into layers. A layer is the document's highest level of abstraction. Photoshop uses multiple layers to create, edit, and manipulate images. At their simplest, layers can be thought of as separate drawing surfaces that you can add or remove any time you want. Layers in Photoshop provide a space for you to create your image. The invisible "base" layer is the starting point for your image. You can use the Layers panel (Window > Layers) to add, delete, and rearrange layers. To access the Layers panel, choose Window > Layers. See Figure 1. Figure 1. Layers panel (Window > Layers). The Layer property window (see Figure 2) is where you enter the most detailed information about layers. There is a very detailed description available in the help. You can set most properties for any layer: Figure 2. Layer properties (Window > Layers). Use the Sels & Specs folder to change the name and location of a layer when creating a new layer from an image (eg. you can name this new layer "Flying Pastures" and change the new layer's position to the top of the Layer list). You can create a multi-page document by selecting a folder as the first position. Use Layer Masks to create semi-transparent layers that can be used to blend one or more layers with another layer. Use the Data window (Window > Data) to view the pixels behind a layer or areas that are hidden. Layers can be used to project images onto documents, like the reflection image view in Figure 3. Figure 3. The Data window (Window > Data). B. Elements of a Photoshop Image Photoshop is a complex and multi-faceted program. To comprehend all of its features, you need a clear idea of its most basic elements. While the colors we see on screen may seem very basic, it is very important to know what they represent. Photoshop's colors, while very easy to understand, can only be represented by a very specific set of RGB (Red, Green,

Mutation analysis of the p53 tumor suppressor gene in leukemic blast progenitor cells from AML patients and cell lines. The p53 tumor suppressor gene is mutated in most human tumors. Recently, by using RFLP analysis and semiquantitative PCR-SSCP analysis we could show p53 mutation in 20-30% of primary AML patients. The aim of the present study was to analyze the mutation status of the p53 gene in a large panel of AML cell lines and AML patient samples. For mutation analysis, DNA was isolated and PCR products were amplified with the use of mismatched primers in order to generate single-strand conformational polymorphisms (SSCPs). Direct sequencing was performed to confirm the SSCP findings. Nine AML patients showed a mutation in the p53 gene. This was confirmed by sequencing. Five different mutations were found: one mutation located in the first hot spot region (exon 4), two mutations in the coding region (exon 5), and two exon 5 mutations in which one is located in the coding region and one in the first hot spot region. Only three cell lines contained the p53 mutation. These findings indicate that mutations of the p53 gene are rare events in leukemic cell lines as well as in primary AML cells. F.2d at 1069 n. 3. The SBA had the opportunity to observe BancorpSouth's financial condition and thus had the burden of demonstrating BancorpSouth's ability to fund the alleged default. See K.C. Jeffers, 810 F.2d at 725. The SBA argues that BancorpSouth's financial statements demonstrate its inability to fund the alleged default in light of the 2008 financial crisis. Yet, those financial statements were submitted to the SBA in 2008 in an effort to obtain financing to purchase the Bank, and the SBA therefore had a copy of BancorpSouth's statements in 2008. The SBA also argues that the Bank's investment in the notes demonstrates its inability to fund the alleged default; however, the Bank did not incur any losses on the notes, and the notes were not issued by a major financial institution. See Sea Cept., 831 F. Supp. 2d at 228 (noting that the plaintiff's investment in the assets of the underlying defendants supported a finding of inability to pay). Finally, the SBA argues that the finding of the bankruptcy court that the Barone plaintiffs and their counsel held a secret interest in the Bank, its analysis did not extend to the requisite elements of an injunction. See Barone v. Gen. Motors Corp., 487 F. App'x 832, 837 (5th Cir. 2012) (affirming the bankruptcy court's finding that the Barone plaintiffs had a secret interest in the Bank, but not extending to the elements of an injunction). The Court thus reaffirms its finding that the Barone plaintiffs have an interest in the Bank but not an interest that extends to an injunction prohibiting BancorpSouth from defaulting on the notes, so their standing is insufficient.
