Simplistic Image Converter is a small, free desktop utility that allows you to batch resize and change the appearance of your pictures. This software is easy to use, has a high conversion speed and runs on any operating system that has the Microsoft.NET framework installed. The main window of Simplistic Image Converter allows you to import the images you want to convert or resize and choose the output folder. It is possible to preview the new pictures before converting them and to change their appearance using the tools provided. You can also change the aspect ratio of the pictures and enable/disable the ability to keep the original file size. The program can import and export most image file formats, like JPG, PNG, TIFF, GIF, BMP, ICO and even TGA. Mac OS X performance from the previous version is the same as they remove they are a lot of bugs. NEW FEATURES • Import new pictures quickly - Importing new pictures is now a lot faster, thanks to the new powerful database, the file system cache and the simultaneous usage of multiple core when importing and making use of multi-core processor. • Optimize Import button - The Optimize Import button has been added to remove duplicates and optimise the path of the pictures. • Filter changes - You can now select your main image type and the location where you want to save your pictures. You can also now select your secondary image type and the location where you want to save your images. Various bugs have been removed. * The developers wanted to make the program smaller, so they have removed the dialogs, the user control panel and the help. *

The developers want to make the program run as fast as possible. This is why they have removed the cca16 editor, that save the files in the pictures folder without the need of any additional software. Now, when you change the pictures the new pics files are saved in the pictures folder. * The developers have also taken out the cca16 editor. Using a CCA editor, you could save your files in another part of your computer and open them again in just one step. In this way you could convert a big number of files at once without the need to load all them in the same program every time. The CCA editor is still able to do this job, but the developers have taken it out to make the software lighter and faster. * The developers have taken out the "attributes" editor aa67ecbc25

The live-cell PCR platform can be used to screen the in vitro interaction of cells, plasmid DNA, siRNA, viral vectors and therapeutics. The video shows results from a live-cell apoptosis screen designed to detect calcium-dependent induction of apoptosis in HeLa cells. Black and yellow fluorescent protein-negative cells are normal HeLa cells. Red fluorescent protein-expressing HeLa cells are genetically modified to express the mitochondria-targeted Flipper protein. Blue and orange fluorescent protein-expressing cells are genetically modified to express the histone H2A-targeted Flipper protein. The blue fluorescent protein-expressing HeLa cells were incubated without (top panel) or with (bottom panel) 10 μ M of the calpain inhibitor calpastatin. The yellow fluorescent protein-expressing HeLa cells were incubated without (top panel) or with (bottom panel) 20 ng/mL of lipopolysaccharide. The orange fluorescent protein-expressing HeLa cells were transfected with scrambled RNA (top panel) or siRNA (bottom panel). The white and red cells are dead cells. Complex partial status epilepticus (CPSE) is a semiological seizure disorder with heterogeneous onset, prognosis, etiology, and treatment response. We present 2 cases of recurrent CPSE with a partial amnesic syndrome. The seizure onset was associated with agitation, confusion, and restlessness in both patients. After cessation of seizure activity, both patients had a period of transient global amnesia (TGA), and they recovered within a week. To our knowledge, TGA after CPSE has never been reported. The reported cases and our 2 new cases suggest that TGA can be a common clinical manifestation of recurrent CPSE. TGA and chronic insomnia might be prodromal symptoms of recurrent CPSE.

Future studies are required to determine whether these symptoms can be used as indicators of impending seizure activity, and whether they may help to predict the course of epilepsy after successful suppression of seizures.
