Synopsis: In the game "S.H.I.E.L.D.", you play as Agent 47, who has been recruited by the secretive organization known as S.H.I.E.L.D. You have the power to manipulate the world around you using a proprietary technological mecha. Choice and consequence are the pillars of the gameplay in this action-adventure game. You fight enemies, explore levels and interact with different characters by using stealth, gunplay or martial arts as you try to achieve your goal. To Kill Or Not to Kill - that is the Question. Game Play: S.H.I.E.L.D. is a stealth based first-person shooter with a strong focus on choice, consequence and player agency, putting you in the role of an Agent in a world where the choice of how and when to kill matters. In the game you have the power to manipulate the world around you using a proprietary technological mecha. You can use this mecha to perform various actions, create multiple paths in order to make the game more replayable. S.H.I.E.L.D. offers multiple ways to play through the game and gives you multiple ways to solve the puzzles. You can use stealth and cover to reduce the number of people who see you, use the mecha to pull items and people out of reach or to distract or help your teammates and use any weapon to defeat enemies and obstacles. In one mission you are even forced to decide whether to kill or to arrest an innocent woman, and in another you have to decide to help or to kill the people you were ordered to protect. Each choice you make has a consequence. In some cases the consequences of your choices can be observed immediately by the other people in the game, in others they are hidden. An example of this is when you are ordered to kill an innocent person: you have the choice to do it or not. If you choose not to kill, it can be observed immediately by your targets. If you choose to kill they will move around, look for you and can even report you to the S.H.I.E.L.D. In addition you will have to take the blame for your actions and this will complicate your task. S.H.I.E.L.D. is an adventure which offers multiple playthroughs as you encounter different opponents and at Southern Oregon Health Systems is just one of the new programs that the Health Care Provider Development School, part of Southern Oregon University, is offering to medical and health science students. Kelly Ericson of Grants Pass, Ore., will learn how to prepare models for treatment or diagnostic testing. Until recently, the 11-month-long program has been practical programs for dentistry students. "We're expanding that now." The Leadership Center on Health Care University Programs announces the formal release of its online database of training and education opportunities. Among the more than 140 listings, over a quarter are California Community Colleges. MORE INFORMATION You, anyone working in the fields of foreign aid, development, or conflict/post-conflict analysis, are invited to apply for participation in the International Humanitarian Network's new online newsletter, "New Books, New Strategies," available at no charge. Northwestern University School of Law graduates Boalt Hall alums graduating from the International Human Rights Clinic represent a wide range of backgrounds and experiences—including from China, Thailand, Kenya, France, and Qatar—and many go on to distinguished careers in human rights work around the world, including in Washington, D.C. Here's one student's international fwd: MONEY Options for Alternative Care Soon after entering private practice, I met a small group of young physicians in New Jersey whose work brought them into proximity with tens of thousands of patients with mental illness in their own communities. They felt the patients were poorly served by their primary care physicians and they wanted to find new ways of caring for them. They began to envision an alternative medical model for community treatment for mental health patients as a large service corporation was said to be exploring the idea. I was hooked by the challenges and excitement of real transformational change and the group turned me on to the field. In New Jersey, two physicians began to practice what was already known as outpatient community mental health services (Ocmhs). One trained and supervised all of the others, as well as some experienced staff. Over the next decade, more clinics were developed and the services expanded, moving ultimately into the broader mental health system. These have grown into more than 170 centers that serve 14-30-35,000 patients each year. The number of areas served now ranges from rural and urban to suburban and community. A new start-up called Patient Centered Care Philadelphia is set to launch in the fall of 2008
