In a separate trailer, EA said that Real Player Motion Tech allows players to reproduce full-speed actions in training mode. However, press materials for the game don't provide more information than that, and EA refrained from further elaborating on Real Player Motion Tech. Highlights of the FIFA 22 trailer include pre-release screenshots of the Ronaldo and Messi modes and a new, mini-match called Career Mode Battle Pass. The latter, EA announced, will release at a later date and will serve as a prequel of sorts to Career Mode. Career Mode will have "matchday" and "manager" options. The latter has been removed from FIFA 19, the only previous EA Sports game to feature a campaign mode. FIFA 22 will be released for PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC on September 29.

What's new:

- Experience the intensity like never before with HyperMotion Technology: the core gameplay enhancements from FIFA 17 return, but now with enhanced feel that allows for more interaction with the ball and opponents.
- The Target-Release System (TRS) has evolved: now the benefits from increasing a player's fitness, delivering better movement and passing has been removed, but factors such as the game's health bar, stamina, and fatigue were added. Players can now suffer injuries throughout the game, leave the pitch for repeated rest breaks, and when fatigue is sustained reduced offensive and defensive play styles.
- AI Optimizations improve opponent play: evolve your tactics to take advantage of the evolution of the enemies to provide even greater fluidity, realism, and strategy when competing with other gamers.
- Play to Roles: begin each game with a customizable range of roles, customizing your team from the off, and challenge others to prove their worth as a new role is introduced throughout the match as it evolves over the course of play.
- Tactical Deeper Injuries: had your players sustain an injury in the middle of a match due to tactical foul play, now they will receive a significant penalty.
- Creative Library: continues to be at the forefront of the expansion with a number of new ways to fully enjoy your creative side. Live your imagination with more ways to create player stylefaces, avatars, hats, home jerseys, and other customizations.
- Dynamic In-Game Media: find yourself lost in the game and using the new "Dynamic HUD" feature, you can "hide" the minimap by tapping the left and right shoulder buttons and then come back to find yourself far away from the game. Peer back into the action by pressing the ZR trigger.
- Dynamic Ball Physics: the ball will feel more like a real ball with significant improvements to its physicality and transitions. Hovering above the ball allows you to see
