Leave No One Behind is a tactical real-time strategy war game inspired by the true events of the Vietnam War in 1965 between the US Army and the Army of the Northern Vietnam to control the X-Ray and Albany landing zones and the Plei Me special forces camp. It is a story about the battles for control of the X-Ray and Albany landing zones and the Plei Me special forces camp. It is inspired by and with respect to playability it depicts the battles for control of the X-Ray landing zone and the Plei Me special forces camp. The battles set the tone of the Vietnam War and the strategy of both sides for years to come. Marines and troops land in the Pacific, north of Da Nang, in October 1965. Their purpose is to secure a landing zone for helicopters to deliver supplies and reinforcements during the upcoming battle for Da Nang. The game begins in late October 1965 and covers the next two weeks of intense fighting around the landing zones, Plei Me. The Americans aim to secure these landing zones, and thereby control the two airfields, before the arrival of the NVA reserve forces who will attempt to push through to Da Nang. The game is set in the background of the second large offensive of the NVA troops as they march south and into Da Nang. To the north, the American's task is to secure the landing zone and the Plei Me base camp. After the capture of the landing zone, reinforcements can begin to arrive from Da Nang and will be the main force for the defense against the NVA assault in the south. The player must prepare the forces in Plei Me and 1st Marine Division to face the NVA attack in Da Nang against the landing zone to secure the area quickly and successfully.
