agents (clonidine, thiazides, labetalol, nitroglycerine) to baboons produced characteristic cystic lesions of the biliary system. Both right and left hepatic ductal cystic dilatations were present but these were not associated with the development of cholestasis. Cystic bile duct enlargement was the only clinical manifestation in these animals. Drug administration produced decreases in the serum cholesterol of 35% to 55% of control values and an increase in total bilirubin of 35% to 55% of control values. The cause of cystic dilatations of the bile ducts produced by antihypertensive agents is unknown. ENGLISH-SCIENTIFIC CORRESPONDENCE Correspondence for 2004 - 2008 Below you will
