Microsoft Specialist Guide to Microsoft Windows 10 (Exam 70-697, Configuring Windows Devices) ebook Is the New York Times Green Enough to Go Green - danso ===== MaysonL And when the Times ran a "vacation" story[1], in which they implied that they didn't know when Chinese workers were on vacation, they took the unusual step[2] of publishing the names of the people who were actually on vacation. [1] [vacation-the-dangers-of-unguarded-foreigners-in-china.html?pagewanted=all&_r=0] [2] ~~~ espadrine It would not be the NYT not doing the same. Because they have the information, they exercise the right to publish information. If they were going to find out without doing this, they would not publish. ~~~ MaysonL Not an answer to my question. (But then, not a question). ----- jeffreymcmanus I don't know that they're green enough, given that NYT is owned by AOL, which is ultimately owned by the devil, but that's just me. ----- michael_h This is the exact same thing that was pointed out on HN a month ago. pdf downloadQ: How to know what other apps are using the same database?

I have a database that stores X amount of information from multiple programs. I've noticed that when a program is using the database, the performance of the database will slow down dramatically. How can I see which other applications are using the database? A: You can use the SQL Server Activity Monitor (aka SQL Monitor in other versions) to see which database and tables are most in use by your database. You can also run the Backup/Restore (include backups in tempdb) without running the SELECT statements so you can see which table/backup are in use most. A: You can monitor queries on the server by going to SQL Server Management Studio and executing the following query: `SELECT TOP 100 QUOTENAME(dbname) + N'.' + QUOTENAME(OBJECT_SCHEMA_NAME(object_id)) + '].' + QUOTENAME(OBJECT_NAME(object_id)) + ']' as [Query] FROM sys.dm_exec_requests WHERE session_id @@SPID;` Sample Output

Where @@SPID is the SPID of the last user on the database. If you look at this and see a lot of queries that are connected to the server, it should probably tell you which tables are being queried.

A: I would suggest looking in the SQL Server Error Log (under Management), there's lots of info there on queries and storage locks. There's a TechNet article on how to use the Event Viewer (Event Viewer on Server 2008 and later). Oh, and there's a `sp_whoisactive` stored procedure, for cases when you're not sure which user is using the database at a given moment. The Earth's population is projected to reach 9.8 billion this century. In spite of the current wide adoption of effective contraceptive methods, the prevalence of sexually transmitted diseases is increasing. Worldwide, all STDs have a greater social and economic impact on women, men, families, and health care systems. The number of people living with HIV/AIDS worldwide remains stubbornly constant
