The most obvious one is the massive facial bruise Lynch sustained Sunday against the Kansas City Chiefs. Lynch also sustained a small laceration on his jaw when he was tackled by Chiefs defensive back Sean Smith. The Raiders will have to figure out a way to get Lynch back on the field against the Denver Broncos, but with his helmet on. They can't un-injure him for the sake of trying to get him back in the game. Lynch will also likely have to learn to play with that facial bruise on his cheek. It's nearly impossible to judge him in the preseason because the competitions and defenses don't seem as stout as the ones we'll see when the regular season starts. At this point, we don't know if Lynch's season is over. He has said it's possible he might not play again, and I'd say that's probably likely. But if he does make it back, I'd imagine we won't see him on the field for the Raiders again unless that's what he wants. Also, the NFL Network's Ian Rapoport reported that the NFL is going to change the way catch rules are interpreted going forward. When under center the quarterback is allowed to step in the pocket

A: These prepositions can be used to describe relationships among people, locations, and events. They are often put in the prepositional phrase with or of. I'm with (or of) my friends, in a car, traveling at 70 miles per hour, Here, each preposition is part of a phrase that describes a relationship. I'm in the car driving at 70 miles per hour I'm sitting in the car Here, the preposition is a free floating part of a clause or sentence. I have eaten with my friends I traveled to (on) the UK with my friends Here, the preposition modifies the nouns that follows it. With is used to describe a relationship among people: I'm with John, you, and some friends The preposition of can be used to describe relationships among people, locations, and events: I'm of John's friends Note that you can't use by to describe relationships among people: I'm by friends, not of them Also, although by is not a good choice in a recipe (unless you want to refer to ingredients), you can use by to describe how a time function: I'm having coffee by two, and I'm late. 6d1f23a050
