In a statement released Friday, Kaepernick's legal team said that the quarterback filed a notice of appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit. "We have been made aware of the NFL's denial on the requested permission to play this season and while we are disappointed with the denial, we will proceed with our legal remedies," the statement released by Reid Weinroth of the National Football Players Association reads. Kaepernick has said he doesn't want to continue playing football because of the treatment of African-Americans in this country. "I am not ready to stand for the National Anthem. To me, this is bigger than football and it would be selfish on my part to look the other way. There are bodies in the street and people getting paid leave and getting away with murder." That is why he took a knee during the national anthem before NFL games, even when he was playing. Kaepernick's legal team wants the U.S. Court of Appeals to rule on the matter and to allow Kaepernick to play this season. New York Jets players locked arms during the National Anthem ahead of Monday night's game against the Buffalo Bills. The NFL later announced that all players would be expected to stand for the National Anthem.
