In order to make the library inaccessible to apps, he had to modify only a tiny amount of code in the CoreMedia framework. >When he reported the vulnerability to Plex, they were grateful but not nearly grateful enough. In a blog post, they say: > ' "The Plex app is regularly updated by Plex staff, who are tasked with continually improving the app and the experience it delivers. With the release of Plex 2.4.3, the last of the major updates, we have discovered and fixed a code execution bug in the underlying CoreMedia framework. We deeply regret to learn of this vulnerability and take immediate action to secure the affected apps, and we appreciate the time and effort the community has put into reporting and helping to resolve it. To our community, your feedback is appreciated and your patience with us is greatly appreciated." > > Once the system has finished booting, press and hold the Power button until the Apple logo appears.
